Fee hike likely starting next fall for textbook rent

by Mimi Lennon

Textbook rental fees for fall semester, 1977 will probably be increased from the current rate of $14 per semester to $17 per semester, Samuel J. Taber, dean of student academic services, said Wednesday.

Taber said reasons for the proposal include increases in textbook costs, student salaries, and a depletion of the textbook library surplus.

"We just can't make it at $14," Taber said. "We held off as long as we could."

Taber added that the textbook library is "not a money making operation, it's a service."

The proposal also recommends an increase in part-time student rental fees to $1.50 per semester hour.

The proposal is presently before President Daniel Marvin and will go before the Board of Governors (BOG) for final approval.

Taber said he hopes the increase will go into effect by the fall semester of 1977.

The BOG had earlier approved an increase of textbook rental fees to $16.25 for the fall semester of 1978, Taber said.

"We're asking for 75 cents more a year earlier," he added. "We just can't wait that long."

BOG Representative Mike Marine said he is "upset about students not being in on this one from the beginning."

Fourteen months ago the textbook library had over $100,000 in surplus, Marine said.

"The increase may be justified," he added, "but I'd like details on how the money was spent."

Lanman death from morphine OD— inquest

By Dave Shanks

A massive overdose of morphine caused the death of Eastern student Andy Lanman, a coroner's jury ruled at the inquest Thursday night.

The jury deliberated nearly an hour before reaching the decision that Lanman died from a dose of morphine which was six to ten times the lethal dosage.

The body of Lanman, who had been reported missing on Feb. 24, was found four and one-half miles south of Charleston on March 20 by two hunters.

In addition, the jury recommended the information be turned over to a grand jury for further investigation.

It also recommended the information be submitted to the Illinois Department of Registration and Education for the investigation of possible misuse of drugs by Dr. Andrew Griffiths, a Charleston dentist.

Griffiths was one of three people testifying before the inquest who were reportedly the last to see Lanman before he disappeared.

Minutes after his testimony, Griffiths collapsed outside City Council chambers where the inquest was held.

Griffiths was attended to by a physician present at the inquest and taken by ambulance to Charleston Community Memorial Hospital.

No information concerning Griffiths' condition, or whether he was admitted to the hospital, was released by the hospital Thursday night.

Coles County Coroner Dick Lynch said the results of tests run on Lanman's body showed there was 28.1 milligrams of morphine per decaliter of bile.

The lethal dosage is three to six milligrams, Lynch said.

There was no morphine found in the urine, which indicated that the "shock was almost immediate. It would have been impossible to remain mobile for more than a moment or two" following induction of the morphine into his body, Lynch said.

He added that the condition of the body was not such to allow for a determination of whether there were needle marks.

During Griffiths' testimony, he repeatedly pleaded the Fifth Amendment and refused to answer any questions, many of which concerned Lanman's alleged presence at Griffiths' residence the night of his disappearance.

Lynch asked Griffiths about possible drug usage at his home as well as about incidents occurring the night of the disappearance and prior to that, but Griffiths continued to invoke the Fifth Amendment.

Also taking the Fifth Amendment during part of his testimony was Gary Stuffle.

Stuffle was alleged to have been with Griffiths at Griffiths' residence on 18th street when Lanman came there to do his laundry the evening of Feb. 23.

Stuffle said he spoke to Lanman "only a couple of moments," then went with Griffiths to another part of the house.

Concerning any questions related to drugs, Stuffle pleaded the Fifth Amendment.

Det. Kenneth Belleau of the Charleston Police Department and Det. Brian McDuffie of the Coles County Sheriff's Department testified during the inquest, relating the result of interviews they had conducted in connection with Lanman's disappearance.

Belleau said, based on his investigation, that Lanman arrived at Griffiths' residence at about 10 p.m. Feb. 23 to do his laundry.

Stuffle was present at that time, along with Griffiths, Belleau said.

The two went to another part of the residence to work on an antenna while Lanman proceeded to do his laundry.

Later, Lanman asked Griffiths and Stuffle if they would like to go to a party, Belleau said.

The two declined, but Lanman, who drove his car to the residence, left about 12:30 a.m. to go to the party, according to Belleau's testimony.

As Lanman was preparing to leave, another friend, Terry LeMay was just arriving at Griffiths'.

LeMay also testified at the inquest, saying Lanman opened the locked door for him and "talked to him a couple of minutes and he left."

LeMay said he saw headlights from a vehicle turn in to a parking lot next to the residence at which time Lanman left the house and got into the car.

McDuffie and Belleau related information obtained in their other interviews.

During the interviews, the officers said, the majority of those questioned reported that Lanman had become involved in the use of narcotics along with Griffiths and Stuffle.

Belleau related information obtained from an interview with Eastern sophomore Nancy Vax who said a week prior to his disappearance Lanman had told her he "had been taking drugs along with Andrew Griffiths, and said that he had been obtaining drugs from Dr. Griffiths because it was very convenient and easy to do it that way. She also said she thought they were injecting heroin at the time, but she was not sure if it was or not."

Belleau also said Vax told him that "Dr. Griffiths has been supplying laughing gas that was a new kick going around Eastern."

Lynch told the jury that as a dentist, Griffiths had been granted a license for the purchase of narcotics.

McDuffie testified that Julie Butus of Niles, Mich., who was reportedly Griffiths' fiancée, said that in January Griffiths had injected her, himself and Lanman with Demeral, a pain killer, and that she had seen a cylinder of nitrous oxide, also known as laughing gas, at the residence a number of times.

Belleau said Larry Panky, who was Lanman's roommate, said that Lanman had "become very close friends with Dr. Griffiths and had been partying with him three or four times per week. One time, Lanman came home and showed him (Panky) a bruise on his hip and he said Dr. Griffiths had given him an injection, but he did not say with what of for what purpose."

Belleau also related an interview with a woman whom he would not identify, who said she had received a call from Dr. Griffiths at about 10 p.m. Feb. 23 inviting her to come over to his house to have a party.

She said Griffiths said Stuffle and Lanman were there at that time but she did not go. At previous times when she had been at Griffiths', she said, she had seen Lanman, Griffiths and Stuffle "smoking cannabis and inhaling nitrous oxide," according to Belleau.

Lynch said all information obtained during the investigation will be turned over to State's Attorney Paul Komada.

Over 60 people were present at the meeting to hear the inquest proceedings.

Carter says economy well enough, scraps $50 rebate

WASHINGTON (AP) - Americans won't be getting those $50 tax rebates from Uncle Sam after all because President Carter has decided the economy is doing well enough without them, the White House said Thursday.

Taxpayers who spent their rebates in advance - and economists say there may be many of them - apparently will be out of luck. But Wall Street, worried that the rebates would be inflationary, reacted with enthusiasm and stock prices rose 10 points in early trading.

Carter is to announce his anti-inflation program at a news conference Friday.

The decision to scrap the rebate was made Wednesday night and obviously caught some advisers by surprise.

Both Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal and Labor Secretary Ray Marshall made speeches in recent days arguing for the rebate.

Also scrapped was a proposed two per cent increase in the investment tax credit for business.

The rebate would have put about $10 billion in the pockets of taxpayers, and the credit would have given business about $2 billion.

An average family of four with income below $20,000 could have expected $200 in rebates.

"That's not enough for a down payment on a new car," one government economist said, "but it will buy a television set, a washing machine or a new suit of clothes."

Both the rebate and the investment tax credit were major elements in the $31 billion, two-year economic stimulus program that Carter proposed to Congress soon after taking office in January.

The rebate plan was in trouble in the Senate, largely because of fears it would fuel inflation and do little to help the economy.

But administration spokesmen insisted the decision to scrap the rebates was made for economic reasons, not political considerations.

Both Blumenthal and Budget Director Bert Lance led the move to convince Carter to withdraw the rebate plan, one source said.

Whatever the reason, the reaction in the Senate was swift and favorable. Carter called key senators Wednesday night to inform them after the decision was made.

CAA drops graduation credit for study-reading skills course

by Lori Miller

The Council on Academic Affairs (CAA) Thursday dropped academic credit for graduation for general studies 1000, a developmental study and reading skills course.

The action, which will take effect spring 1978, allows credit to be counted for class load hours and grade point average.

However, under the decision, students may not take the course and receive credit toward the 120 hours necessary to graduate.

Although the program was approved in 1975 without credit for graduation, then President Gilbert C. Fite added a stipulation placing credit for the program on a two year basis.

The proposal was opposed by the general studies teaching staff, which originally indicated that the program as a whole would be dropped if credit for graduation were withdrawn.

All faculty members involved in the program teach the courses on a volunteer basis, in addition to regular department loads.

Shirley Moore, of the psychology department, said the program content "justified counting credit" because the course offers more than just study skills.

Moore said that one-third of the course consists of learning the chemical and psychological processes in memory, concepts in perception and attitudes which could affect study and the objective and subjective principles behind test.

"A lot of what I teach in study skill I also teach in my psychology courses," Moore said.

"They may learn less theory, but I think if a student is in class four days a week plus individual reading, then there is enough content to justify the credit," she added.

However, CAA member Herb Lasky said the move to count credit for the course could lead to other remedial courses receiving credit toward graduation also.

"If the majority of students are to be benefited (through better study skills) and are unable to realize that that is their reward, then I think we've spoon fed them enough," Lasky said.

"Where does it stop? Where is the logical stopping place after this?" he added.

Other CAA members had earlier objected to credit for graduation because, they said, the course offerings were not college level material and were designed mainly to help students with low entrance test scores.

The CAA did not take action, however, to require the course for those students entering with low ACT scores, or to change the voluntary status of the teaching faculty.

CAA member Alan Aulabaugh said the program should be "officially recognized" with regular teaching faculty to insure the stability of the course.

"If faculty teach it on a voluntary basis, then they can decide also not to do it, or what they want in the course," Aulabaugh said.

Program director Gene Blair said after the meeting, however, that the teaching staff for next fall has not been definitely determined, and will be considered later.

Vice presidential interviews to be arranged this weekend

The five vice presidential candidates finalists, one of which is from Eastern, will probably be contacted this weekend to arrange for on-campus interviews, Search Committee Chairperson Walter Lowell said Thursday.

Although Lowell said there is only one candidate from Eastern, he would not say who the person is.

Lowell said he will release the names of the finalists as soon as he makes arrangements with them for interviews, but he added that President Daniel Marvin will have to approve the five candidates before Lowell makes the calls.

"If he (Marvin) will approve these five (candidates), then this weekend I will call them at home," he said.

However, if one or more of the candidates is still not interested in the position, Lowell said "I don't know what we (the committee) will do."

He added that if someone is no longer interested in the job, then the committee might choose more finalists from the original list or might just keep the reduced list of finalists.

Lowell said that the final decision as to what to do in this case would be up to Marvin, but he added that if one or more finalists does not want to come for interviews, he will not release the names until Marvin's decision is made.

At Thursday's search committee meeting, the members discussed the information they had learned when calling persons on the finalists' campuses, Lowell said.

RHA to set up schedule to hear student senate candidates' talks

by Tom Keefe

A schedule for student senate candidates speaking at Residence Hall Association (RHA) meetings will be set up, Rod Hasler, RHA representative, said Thursday.

Student senate elections will be held May 4, and Hasler said many of the candidates will come to RHA meetings to give short speeches and then to answer questions.

RHA will probably have the candidates come to the April 28 meeting to speak, he said.

He said he could not remember exactly how many candidates came to talk to RHA before the last election, but he said "there were around two dozen."

Some of the candidates complained at that time because they had to wait to speak and so this schedule "is for their curtesy, he said.

He said any of the candidates could speak if they wished, but since RHA members can only vote for residence hall and at-large candidates, these are the ones who usually come.

A time limit of two or three minutes would be set on their speeches and then each candidate would field any questions RHA members had for another 15 minutes or so, he said.

The questions would probably involve asking the candidates what they could do for the residence halls, he said.

Women's awareness workshop to feature lecturers

by Lori Miller

A woman's awareness workshop, featuring speeches on women's health care, employment opportunities, political action and economic security, will be held here Saturday in the University Union.

The workshop is sponsored by the Mattoon-Charleston chapter of the American Association of University Women (AAUW), and is open to all interested persons, publicity chairperson Rose Mary Shepherd said Wednesday.

The workshop will include nine special guest lecturers, and women's exhibits in the Union addition Oakland room.

Admission for students is free, except to the luncheon, which will be held at 1 p.m. in the Union Fox Ridge room.

Luncheon tickets for students and other participants will be $4, Shepherd said.

Admission for those other than students will include a $3 registration fee.

Speaking at the luncheon will be Joan Huber, assistant professor of sociology at the University of Illinois, whose talk is entitled "One of My Best Friends is a Woman."

Huber has worked as a consulting editor for the American Journal of Sociology, and received her dissertation under a grant from the labor department, Shepherd said.

Shepherd said this is the first workshop of its kind to be sponsored by the AAUW, and that so far approximately 100 persons have signed up to participate.

"We're really proud of the program which will be offered, as most of the speakers are nationally ranked people," Shepherd said.

Shepherd said each of the speakers is "a person who has achieved highly" in her field.

"We hope students will come to this, which is the reason the admission is free for them," Shepherd said.

Although Shepherd said she is unsure how many men have signed up for the workshop, she added they "are very welcome."

The schedule for the workshop is as follows:

Fox Ridge State Park to be plentiful with game — ranger

Although hunting season dates haven't been set yet for Fox Ridge State Park, Park Ranger Greg Kile said Wednesday that game will be plentiful during season.

Opening date for hunting at Fox Ridge, located eight miles south of Charleston on Route 130, will probably be in June or July with the squirrel season starting in August, Kile said.

On the more than 180 huntable acres in Fox Ridge fox and gray squirrel are the most abundant species found with quail, rabbit and dove showing fair populations, Kile said.

Pheasant and Woodcock can be found on occasion but the best upland game hunting comes with the use of a good dog and concentrating on the field, timber and brush borders, he added.

As a state park, Fox Ridge comes under the jurisdiction of the Illinois Department of Conservation and "We follow their policies," Kile said, "keeping the policies simple."

Probably the major policy or rule enforced at Fox Ridge besides having a valid hunting license is that only shotguns are allowed, Kile said. Pistols, airguns or pellet guns are not permitted, he added.

During deer season, hunters are required by state law to wear an orange cap and vest but "I suggest hunters wear the cap and vest at all times," Kile said.

The biggest problem Kile said he has had with hunters is "making sure when the public comes to hunt, they stay in our boundaries because we're surrounded by private land."

With plentiful game and few rules, Kile said that he felt Fox Ridge was one of the finest hunting areas in Coles County but "I don't know how the hunters feel about that."

Kile said he has no way of knowing how many people are using the area because of two reasons.

The first reason given was that the road counter, which had been chained to a tree, was stolen. This counter would count the number of cars entering the area, Kile said.

Fact sheets on hunting at Fox Ridge can be obtained at the ranger's office, Kile added.

AXA walk-a-thon may be covered by area television

by Norm Lewis

Television cameras may be present for Saturday's walk-a-thon to raise money for Special Olympics, Coordinator Tim Hoos said Thursday.

Hoos said the Champaign and Danville television stations may cover the walk-a-thon, which will begin at the Mattoon Cross-Country Mall at 9 a.m. and end at Lantz Gymnasium.

Last year, the walk-a-thon, sponsored by the Lambda Chi Alpha fraternity, raised over $1,200 for Special Olympics and is expected to surpass that figure this year, Hoos said.

Pledge sheets will still be available in the University Union lobby through Friday.

Walkers can get rides to the Mattoon Mall from Old Main at 8 a.m. Hoos said. Cars will carry the participants to the mall "in a couple of shifts" between 8 and 9 a.m., he added.

Miller brewing distributors will be sponsoring a party after the walk at the Lambda Chi Alpha house, located on Fourth Street across from Pemberton Hall.

In addition, tee-shirts and awards will also be given to participants, Hoos said.

McDonald's will be also be supplying the walkers with coupons for hamburgers, he added.

Six checkpoints, one each at the start and at the finish of the trip, and four on the route, will offer "water, rides and first aid," and will check each pledge sheet to verify how far the walker has traveled, Hoos said.

Walkers can turn in their pledge money to the Bank of Charleston—Special Olympic Fund "as soon as possible" after Saturday, Hoos said.

Inside...

This week's "On the Verge" covers the intramural program at Eastern, which has experienced a growing interest in past years. Inside you will find that softball has changed its image with the competition of 136 teams in this spring's program. There is also a run down on the spring track meet and a column about women weight lifters by Tom Keefe, as well as a story on a new program that will extend to families of Eastern students and a chart on when the intramural facilities are open.

This supplement was co-edited by Sue Nasenbeny. Hope you enjoy it. Next week's supplement takes a look at Greek Week.

Intramurals attract 3/4 of students—Dutler

by Sue Nasenbeny

A growing number of Eastern students, about 75 percent, participate in some type of intramural activity, Intramural Director Dave Dutler said recently.

"There has been considerable growth in the intramural programs, especially basketball, volleyball and softball," in the past five years, Assistant Intramural Director Annie Lee Jones explained.

For example, in women's intramurals alone, she said, in which 30 to 40 per cent of Eastern's female population participate, the number of volleyball teams has tripled since 1972 while the number of flag football and basketball teams have doubled.

For the overall intramural program, this growth in participation is particularly true of team sports, she added, including such activities as soccer, bowling and swimming.

However, students also enter individual-oriented competition such as intramural track relays, gymnastic meets, tennis and racquetball tournaments and wrestling meets, to name a few, she said.

Who pays for the officials of the 100 or so games scheduled each week?

"We're very much dependent on student help," Jones explained. "About 91 percent of the intramural budget is used as payroll for student officials, building supervisors and lifeguards."

The remaining nine percent of the budget is used to purchase equipment, awards and miscellaneous things, Dutler added.

"This is one activity where student's fees are turned back to students in a program which reaches the masses," Jones said.

The intramural program has been allocated $34,494 by the Apportionment Board for financing next year's activities, Dutler said. This is an increase from this year's allotment of about $29,000.

He said the added revenue will be used in simplifying and streamlining the intramural system.

The intramural director said he hopes to extend the hours of the Lantz complex and put up a new type of bulletin board with detailed activity information.

He has already implemented an intramural "Hotline" which is a code-a-phone that he dictates into daily such information as entry deadlines, scheduled games for that day, and when facilities are open, he said.

The "Hotline" number is 581-5561. The cost of maintaining it is about $20 monthly, Dutler explained. "It saves us a lot of man hours," he said. Previously, the intramural office had been flooded with phone calls all day and the "Hotline" eliminates many trivial interruptions.

The two intramural directors do not hold their positions on a full-time basis, Dutler continued. He said his job entails 50 percent administration and 50 percent teaching, while Jones' position requires that she spend 75 percent of her time teaching and 25 percent in intramurals.

However, Dutler said running Eastern's intramural program "is a full time job for more than one person. We are understaffed."

Two graduate assistants, a man and a woman, had been assigned to aid in administering the activities, Dutler said, but the woman has since been reassigned.

Dutler instructs an intramural course where he assigns students to work in close coordination with the administration of a program, Jones said, but they are just learning how to do this, although they can be of considerable assistance.

Dutler said his main emphasis is on restructuring the administration of the intramural programs so that more time will be devoted to expansion of programs.

In order to better improve the intramural system at Eastern, Dutler is attending this weekend the National Intramural and Recreation Association convention in Boston, he said.

Females should lift weights for summer

As part of this intramural supplement, I was asked to do a column on women weightlifters.

The closest I ever came to weightlifting was as a kid when I read those Charles Atlas ads in the back pages of magazines.

You remember those ads, don't you? Some skinny runt would be sitting at the beach with his girlfriend and a 250 pound bruiser would come along, kick sand in his face and steal his girlfriend from him.

In a fit of anger, the runt would send for Atlas' weight program and in two weeks he had gained 150 pounds, sprouted a forest of hair on his chest and lowered his voice one octave.

He would then charge back to the same spot on the beach where the bruiser and his girlfriend were still sitting and he would punch out the bruiser and win his girl back.

Granted, that image was of men weightlifters, not women, but I figured women jocks to be very similar (look, I'm not naive, my roommate told me about them).

I knew when I headed for the Lantz Gym weightroom that none of the girls would be built like Arnold Schwarzenegger of "Pumping Iron" fame. I also knew they wouldn't want to be and so I was curious to learn their reasons why they weightlift.

By the way, you might have noticed that no pictures of women weightlifters accompany this column.

I understand from Richard Foertsch, our photography editor, that he did indeed go to Lantz with the notion of taking some pictures.

However, when the ladies present noticed, they decided they weren't very photogenic with dumbbells in each hand and so they huddled in a corner and threw five pound weights at him until he left.

This explains the lack of pictures and Foertsch's new bruises.

Two of the girls I talked to, Nancy Jurgenson and Joni Comstock, are physical education majors and are also on Eastern's volleyball team.

Both of them said they weightlifted to increase their strength and endurance for volleyball.

Jurgenson said that when men find out she lifts, "they aren't impressed, but they respect me for working at my sport."

Anne Dawley, a freshman home economics major, said she weightlifted "to stay in shape."

She said she chose to weightlift because "It's better than running."

Lauri Witek, a freshman Political Science major, walked in with a group of fellow Carman Hall residents and said they are weightlifting because "summer is coming and so is Florida."

She said she and her friends wanted to lose a little weight and also tone up their muscles a bit before summer comes.

The weight room is open exclusively for women from 6 to 7 p.m. on Mondays and Wednesdays.

Most of the girls said they were glad to have a time when they could lift without having men around to watch.

You women really have a good opportunity to firm up and trim down before summer comes (be honest-you cried when you tried on last years' bathing suit and looked in the mirror).

The benefits far outweigh any possible disadvantages. You won't turn into a muscular freak. (No matter how I kid you about female jocks, they do not have abnormal hormone balances.)

If you need a rallying cry to motivate you, just remember what Witek said..."summer is coming!"

Team names reflect inner fame

Column by Joe Natale

One good way to satisfy that starving ego of yours is by being on a championship intramural team. When you get older and go to your dentist, doctor, or psychiatrist you'll see his diplomas covering half the wall behind his desk, and you'll think, "all that parchment is nice, but I was on Eastern Illinois University's championship intramural basketball team in the Class D weekend league."

But what if you weren't lucky enough to get on a championship team. If could happen that you were a member of an also ran team. It's very possible that you could hitch your wagon to a real loser. The chances of this happening is great because no matter how many teams there are in a league, there can only be one winner (and moral victories don't count).

So even though you may lose on the intramural field of valor, you have to devise a way of salvaging your pride and self respect. And that is done by picking a name for your intramural team. If you can pick a name that can express your team's very existance then you have accomplished something.

After careful examination of the names of intramural teams at Eastern, I have determined that they fall into five categories, which are: the gut level, the naive level, the macho level, the drug level and the cosmic level. Now let's examine each of these five levels.

First there are the names of the teams on the gut level. The names of these teams reflect an expression of the team members true personalities on a very lowest plain of existance. The names in this group are the Saps, the Nurds, the Jaggs, the Fubars, the Pig Skins, the Nads, Hot Ice, the Mildo Muff Divers, the Bar Hoppers, the Nuerotic Nine and the Quacks.

Secondly there is the names of teams which reflect a pleasant, yet naive outlook towards life. These teams, no matter how innocent they may seem, show that there is some oasis of compassion in this troubled world. There are not many teams in this group, but the teams include the Good Guys, the Lamb Chops, the Apostles and the Lost Pups.

The third group is in direct juxtaposition to the naive group. The teams in this category are trying to use their name to strike fear into the hearts of their opponents to the point that they would rather study or commit suicide. Teams in this category include the Mighty Midgits, the Acme Truckers, Mad Dogs, the Hurricanes, Double Trouble, Bad Company, Blue Veins in Action and the Necrophiliacs.

The fourth group is teams which names indicate that the team members are very aware of the drug culture in society. Team members in this group could be considered social misfits, and their team names could be considered as a sort of rebellion against the status quo. Drug related terms are used for that since drug usage, next to adultery and robbing banks, is considered taboo. Teams in his group include Ed's Heads, the East Hall Tokers, the Bongers, the Weeds and the Bong Difference and Carman Hall.

The last group are made up of team names on the very highest level of consciousness. These team names are express the true feelings of the team members who see intramural sports not as a game, but as a mystical experience. These names show that the team members people are operating on a cosmic level. They are the ones that are trying to find the true meaning of life via intramural sports. Team names that fall in this category include the Meteors, the Bohemeans, the Titans, Starbucks, the Unknowns, the Cosmic Rays, Space Cadets and the Flying Guinards.

136 teams change softball's image

by Doug Seymour

Contrary to popular belief, softball isn't just your typical summertime assembly of middle-aged beer bloated slobbs playing for kegs-loser buys.

Instead, hoards of college students flock to the ball diamonds every spring in anticipation of a hard fought contest.

This spring Eastern is fielding 136 intramural softball teams divided into 24 leagues, which range from men's and women's to co-rec leagues. To add variety to the program, fast and slow pitch divisions have also been established, Intramural Director Dave Dutler said recently.

As a result of the erratic, hot-cold spring time weather, schedules for each team range from four to six games, he said. Smaller leagues generally have the shortest season due to the number of teams.

Games are played throughout the week at the Buzzard Lab School field and fields adjacent to the Lantz building.

Make-up games for rained out contests are played at 2 and 3 p.m. Sunday for those teams that regularly play on Monday and Wednesday. Tuesday and Thursday contests are made up at 4 and 5 p.m. Sunday, Dutler explained.

If poor weather should prevail, Dutler suggested that team managers dial the "IM Hotline", (581-5561) between 3 and 4 p.m. to determine if the game will be played.

Dutler said other guidelines have been made to help regulate contests. Spikes are allowed provided they consist of plastic soles and do not exceed the height of three-eighths of an inch.

Also, the arc of a pitch must range between three and 10 feet.

Women's softball got off to their start on March 28, while the men's season began April 7. Playoffs are scheduled for April 27.

Dutler's main objective for this season is to avoid having post-season playoffs run into finals' week as they did last year, he added.

Competitors head outdoors for April 28 IM track meet

by Brian Nielsen

An indoor intramural track meet was staged last March, but as far as most Eastern students are concerned the bigger event is coming up on April 28. When intramural competitors go outdoors.

Spiced by the addition of a women's meet, possibly twice as many men competitors as were in the indoor version, and the anticipated appearance of a former Olympian, the 1977 outdoor track meet could be one of the highlights of the intramural year.

Entries are open until April 25 for the festivities scheduled for April 28. The rain date is set for May 2.

Approximately 200-250 entries are expected to enter the men's division, Gerry Byrne, an intramural worker and meet official estimated, which is noticeably more than the 140 which participated in the indoor relay meet.

Women's Intramural Director Annie Lee Jones expects at least as many as the 38-athletes entered last year.

Entry rules state all university students are eligible for the meet except varsity track or cross country athletes.

Also, varsity baseball or softball players are ineligible for the softball throw, if that event is contested. The softball throw is on the tentative schedule, but may be erased, intramural workers said.

Topping the list of pre-meet individual stars has to be graduate student James Beckles, who has a shot at the national intramural 100 yard dash record.

Beckles, who ran for British Guiana in the 1972 Olympics in Munich, has a life time best :09.3, while the national intramural mark is 9.55 seconds, Byrne said.

A record run will not be easy, he added, since spiked shoes are not allowed in the intramural meet and his competition definitely will not be of the level he competed against internationally.

"He's eligible according to the rules to run in intramurals," Byrne explained. "Dr. Dutler (Eastern intramural director) will have to make the final rulings."

Beckles will compete for Wanafunze Afrimama, who won last year's outdoor meet by 13 points.

Other team contenders could be U.S. Olympic Team and Sigma Chi, the champions of last month's indoor contest.

In the women's meet, Tri Sigma is the defending team titlist, and three record setters from last year are expected to be among the top individual entries.

No matter who wins or who gets the records, it is the participation that is important in intramurals. And the intramural officials feel they have a winner in the outdoor track meet.

New programs to offer intramural facilities to student family members

by Karen Griffin

A family recreation program will be initiated by the Intramural department this summer, Dave Dutler, intramural director, said recently.

The program will allow the families of students to use the intramural facilities Saturday from 7 to 9 p.m., Sunday from 1 to 3 p.m. and possibly Wednesday evenings.

Dutler said "nothing was ever spelled out as far as having a family rec program in the past."

He added that the spouse of a student has always been considered the equivalent of a student by the intramural office. Dutler also said that he would like to enlarge the program for fall to include "Saturday afternoon and evening and possibly Wednesday evening."

If the program is enlarged there will be a small charge of "a couple of dollars" for student families, Dutler added.

There has been a program for faculty and staff families in existence between five and seven years.

The faculty staff family program will hopefully be enlarged and will cost $30 per year for the entire family, Dutler said.

In addition, Dutler said the intramural office will be instituting a new policy this fall and possibly this summer which will require all persons using the facilities to check in at the intramural office and receive a stamp.

The program will allow the facilities to be regulated more easily.

Senate committee okays guidelines for pharmacy, lawyer referral service

by Holly Rudigler

Guidelines for the pharmacy and the student lawyer referral service were approved Wednesday by the political studies committee of the Student Senate.

The guidelines for the pharmacy were proposed by Jerry Heath, Director of the Health Service, co-chairperson Chip Liczwick said.

The proposal calls for a separate pharmacy board, which will consist of one pharmacist, one physician, two members of the health service staff and two students.

Liczwick said, "the Eastern pharmacy is all set up and ready to be initiated next fall."

Concerning the lawyer referral service, Committee Co-chairperson Judy Remlinger said "we need some kind of structure and these guidelines give us that plus freedom to expand."

The proposed referral program must still be approved by the Political Science Department, Vice President for Student Affairs Glenn Williams and President Daniel Marvin, Remlinger said.

There will be no charge for the referral service, Liczwick said.

The committee members agreed that complete legal information should be available and small claims court should be also included in the referral service.

The committee members, who will be screened by the political science department before making referrals, can list attorneys in town, but they cannot recommend one specific lawyer.

"We want to get ideas from all town attorneys," Remlinger said.

The student lawyer service "should be a very smooth operation," she added.

Help for unwanted pregnancies offered on Birthright hotline

by Dave Pugh

Women with unwanted pregnancies in the Charleston area can now get confidential help from the Charleston Birthright chapter.

The group, which began operating a hotline telephone April 4, is chartered by the "national organization out of Toronto" Steve Trainor, president of the organization and an Eastern student said.

The hotline, which is in operation from noon to 10 p.m. Monday through Friday, is staffed by trained volunteers, Trainor said.

"Birthright is an emergency pregnancy group who's goals are to try and help a woman who is pregnant.

"We do this by offering a loving atmosphere, reasoning through the solutions, and going over the community resources," Trainor explained.

"We give the girl the knowledge that somebody does care," Trainor added.

When a woman first calls, Trainor explained "We calm her down, show her the problem isn't as crucial as she might have made it up to be. It usually takes a number of contacts to gain her confidence."

"After she trusts us, then we go into the situation, talk about the family, the boyfriend, what abortion entails, help her get medical attention, and financial aid if she needs it," he said.

The volunteers who run the hotline undergo "continuous training. One volunteer initially goes through a counseling session, to understand what to say and what not to say, and then there was a prenatalist who came in, and training with a lawyer to understand the legal aspects," he added.

Trainor, commenting on how the group deals with the abortion issue, said, "The group operates on the basis of the right of every woman to give birth and the right of every child to be born. What happens is her decision--we're not going to say, 'That's fine, I'll arrange it (an abortion) for next Tuesday, neither are we going to say, 'Well, if that's the way you feel about it, goodbye.'"

The group is non-profit, and is supported by donations, Trainor elaborated. "The Right to Life (organization) of Coles County donated $100, then I donated the opening expenses. Soon we're going to request donations from the community organizations. I felt that we had to be going before we went around asking for donations."

Trainor said he had found the Charleston community "apathetic" in helping the organization get started. "People in the community know more places (institutions) and how to get a hold of them," he explained.

"We'd like to have community support," he added.

State official denies industry sway in setting self-service gas rules

SPRINGFIELD (AP) State Fire Marshal Bert Walsh, who has financial ties with oil industry, said Thursday that draft regulations submitted to him last year by an industry consultant were not used in setting rules for self-service gasoline in Illinois.
In the course of the research, his draft rule was not even considered," Walsh said. The draft flammable liquids code, which would have allowed self-service gasoline in Illinois, was given to Walsh last year by a consultant for the American petroleum Institute, lobby arm for major oil companies. Published accounts that Walsh was considering adopting the code stirred a controversy because of Walsh's financial ties to the giant Marathon Oil Co. Walsh worked 36 years for a Marathon subsidiary before taking a leave of absence to become fire marshal. And a financial disclosure statement showed he had more than $41,000 in Marathon stock.

Minicomputer field increasing—Abraham

Paul Pinderski
Microcomputers and their applications in industry and consumer markets in an increasing field, University of Illinois (U of I) Electrical Engineering Professor Jacob Abraham, said Thursday.
Abraham, speaking to pre-engineering majors, said industry is "mainly looking for people who can put them (microprocessors) to use."
He said the field began expanding in the early 70s because the use of microcomputers in products was inexpensive and small.
Abraham, a Stanford graduate in electrical engineering, said "Industry is looking for people with knowledge of microcomputers with new ideas of how to use them. New applications include home video games, microwave ovens, measuring devices and lighting control or air conditioning, Abraham said.

Abraham, who works at the Coordinated Science Lab at the University of Illinois, said the course curriculum there is mainly involved with design of microcomputers and programming.
Four basic areas of study include computer science; computer science/mathematics; study of theoretical use of computers; electrical engineering, and computer engineering.
The course studies at U. of I. include electrical and electronics classes, computer programming courses, microcomputer labs and experiments, and math courses.
The courses involve "better understanding" of the components and circuitry

'Pig killers' to amend deed by humane society cleanup

by the Associated Press
Now, Phi Gamma Delta is going to the dogs.
The fraternity's chapter at the University of Illinois (U of I), which found itself under heavy fire for the ritual killing of a pig, will try to make amends by sprucing up the cages, pens and buildings at the Champaign County Humane Society.
About 50 members of the fraternity are expected to turn out April 30 and May 1 for the big cleanup, Rick Schurtz, president of the humane society, said Thursday.
Two members of the fraternity are due to go on trial the next day, May 2. They are charged with violating a state law that prohibits cruelty to animals.
Witnesses reported seeing the pig being dragged across a parking lot, lowered by a rope around its neck into a tub of water and covered with a cement block until it drowned.
The pig was then thrown into the garbage.

The ceremony on March 5 was supposed to be a pig-roast dinner, national officers of the fraternity in Lexington, Kentucky, said.
They said they regretted the incident.
"At least maybe now, something good will come out of all this," Schurtz said. "I don't think we'll ever see that kind of thing happen again around here—at least by the Fijis."
Schurtz said the humane society's shelter usually has a population of about 75 dogs and nearly as many cats.
"We have horses, parakeets and an alligator. I imagine now after Easter we're going to start getting a lot of bunnies, too," he added.
Schurtz said Todd Stevenson, president of the fraternity on the U of I campus, said members want to do something symbolic to make up for the incident.
"They'll scrub down the cages really good, sanitize them and do some painting on our building," Schurtz said.

Women's track team to compete in Illinois meet

by Brian Nielsen

After a 2 1/2 week layoff, Eastern's women's track team will jump back into action against probably its toughest competition of the year at the University of Illinois invitational Saturday at Champaign.

Joan Schmidts' crew has been out of action since its outdoor opener on March 30, a 71-61 success over Indiana State. Since then the Panthers' only scheduled meet, a dual with Purdue, was rained out.

They'll be well-tested Saturday, however, in what Schmidt calls "a mini-Big 10 meet."

Defending champion Illinois, last year's runner-up Ohio State, Purdue and Indiana will represent the Big 10.

The remainder of the field, consists of Division I schools, Missouri and Western Michigan.

"From the looks of the teams it should be a close meet," Schmidt judged. "I don't think there's any one team that should be outclassed."

Four freshmen record-breakers and two strong veterans are the Panthers' top hopefuls for individual titles, of which Eastern did not score any last year at Illinois.

Twin sisters Robin and Ruth Smith, who have established school records both indoors and outdoors in the two-mile and mile runs respectively, should be top challengers in their specialties again Saturday.

The other two record-breakers in the outdoor opener were Sue Fortune in the discus and javelin thrower Donna Gale.

Junior Sue Wrenn and Senior Kim Davis were third and fourth, respectively, in the invitational's 880 run a year ago.

First home softball contest set for Saturday

by Rudy Ruettiger

The friendly confines of Lantz field await the Panther softball team for the first time this season as they return from the road to play back-to-back doubleheaders Friday and Saturday against Lincoln Trail Junior College and Western Illinois University.

The Friday twinbill will start at 3 p.m., and Saturday's games begin at 1 p.m.

Eastern has a 5-3 record, including a convincing two-night doubleheader triumph Wednesday over Danville Junior College at Danville.

Coach Helen Riley says her girls "are anxious to play at home."

Friday's game will provide a warm-up for the Western game on Saturday. Lincoln does not expect to be a challenge for the Panthers.

"I don't anticipate a tough time. I'd rather be cautious than to say 'no difficulty,'" Riley commented.

Karen Redfern will get the nod in game 1, with Thies and Goeken throwing in the latter game.

Western will invade Lantz field sporting a 7-2 record (prior to a Thursday night game) and has their top pitcher Robin Lindley from last season's squad.

Eastern split a doubleheader with Western last season.

"They lost a solid catcher this year and their second team pitcher transferred to Northern Illinois," Riley said.

"I don't know what they have picked up, but will predict the games will be close," she added.

Redfern will again get the starting job in the first game, and depending on the outcome of the first game, Riley will decide who will toe the rubber for the second tilt.

Soccer team to play

Eastern's soccer team will play their first outdoor game of the spring, hosting University of Illinois in a 2 p.m. match at Lakeside Field Sunday.

Ohio duo joins Eastern basketball program

by Brian Nielsen

Basketball coach Don Eddy announced the signings of two Canton, Ohio, players, a 6-9 center and a playmaking guard late Wednesday night, to bring the number of recruits to five.

Dennis Mumford, 6-9, and 5-10 Tony Armstead, teammates in Timkin High School in Canton, signed national letters of intent. Eastern has one more scholarship available.

Earlier Wednesday, assistant coach Kae Moore signed 6-5 Jim Williams of Monticello, 6-5 Lester Mitchell of Kankakee Eastridge and 6-7 Dave Koehn of Peotone.

Mumford and Armstead led Timkin to a 17-4 season this year.

"Both of these young men played on an excellent basketball team that was well-schooled in fundamentals," Eddy said.

Timken coach Don Everett had previously coached at Canton McKinley High School, which produced Michigan University All-American Phil Hubbard and former Illinois player Nick Weatherspoon, who now plays in the NBA.

Mumford averaged 15 points and 11 rebounds per game and "has the size, speed and potential to become an excellent defensive postman," Eddy said. His whole game appears to be in front of him," him."

Armstead, starred as a playmaker, handing out eight assists per game to go along with his 11 point scoring norm.

"Armstead is an outstanding passer," Eddy lauded. "He has good court sense—a quarterback-type backcourt man."

The Timken mates, along with the three Illinois high school forwards, brighten Eastern's basketball future outlook as the Panthers seek a fourth straight national tournament appearance next year.

Eastern was third in the NCAA Division II meet with a 23-8 record in 1976 and was 18-11 in the past season, losing in the Great Lakes Regional to Randolph-Macon, the eventual national runner-up.

Eddy pointed to the two Kankakee area stars, Mitchell and Koehn, as strong freshmen prospects.

"Both of these athletes have the ability to play on the varsity as freshmen," Eddy feels. "That's what we're looking for, someone who can make a quick transition to college basketball."

"It's hard to say (who can step in to play as freshmen)," Moore had commented earlier this week "But next year would be a golden opportunity for any freshman, because we're rather thin, especially front."

Track home schedule to end with 'Relays'

by R. B. Fallstrom

In what coach Neil Moore describes as "one of the toughest meets we've had," the track team will host the 14th Eastern Relays Saturday at O'Brien Field.

Fourteen teams are entered in the meet, Eastern's final home encounter. Field events will start at 10:30 a.m., with the first running event beginning at 11:50 a.m. The meet will end about 5 p.m.

Eastern is coming off a devastating victory in last week's invitational meet, and will welcome back some of its victims for the Relays, as well as some new opponents.

The list of entries includes Indiana State, Southeast Missouri State and Parkland Junior College, who all participated in last week's invitational.

Also coming are Purdue, which Eastern beat indoors, Notre Dame, DePaul, Northern Illinois, Augustana, University of Illinois-Chicago Circle, Lewis, North Central, Illinois Benedictine and Loyola.

Eastern had three champions last year, including Bert Meyers in the steeplechase. Meyers won't be favored this time around though, because of Purdue's Robin Liddell, who has run about 20 seconds faster.

The distance medley team also won in record time last year, but only one fourth of the squad, miler Mike Larson, will return.

Ten meet records were set last year. Moore and distance coach Tom Woodall will concentrate most of their efforts on one of them—the four-mile relay mark—in Saturday's meet.

Northern Illinois, which set the record of 17:19.1 minutes last year, will return the same quartet, but the Eastern coaches aren't worried.

"That's a lousy record," Woodall said to me," Moore commented. "He thinks we should break it (the record) pretty easily."

Competing for Eastern in the event will be John McInerney, Duncan McHugh, Casey Reinking and Larson. The four will have to average under 4:20 to break the existing mark.

Moore also thinks Eastern has a strong team in the two-mile relay with Pat Hodge, Reggie Johnson, Joe Sexton and Keith Gooden competing.

The 440 relay team will probably be without the services of Gerald Bell, who has a hamstring injury. "He (Bell) was running one of our best legs on the 440," Moore lamented.

In most of the individual events, Eastern will enter several athletes. "It's our last week to experiment. From here on in, fewer and fewer of our team will be involved," Moore said.

Making his debut in track, freshman Reo Rorem, who will compete along with John Christy and Bill James in the mile. Rorem missed the entire indoor season with a hip injury, and has been sidelined recently with a heel ailment.

Triple jumper Charles Hollis is also scheduled to compete for the first time in 1977, after coming back from a back problem and flu.

Thus far, only two performers have met Moore's stringent qualifying standards for the Division II national meet, which will be May 26-28 in Fargo, N.D.

Bell has qualified twice under last year's fifth place Division II finish in the 100, and Bob Johnson has qualified in the 120 high hurdles.

"So far, it's just those two. And me, I'm going, so we have three," Moore said.

Tennis squad to get no relief

by Josh Martin

Eastern's tennis team thought facing three formidable Division I schools last weekend was more than enough, but this weekend will not bring any relief.

Eastern travels to Bloomington Friday morning to face Illinois State and Bradley University in a triangular. Both schools are in Division I, the fourth and fifth such opponents for the Panthers this year.

"This is one of the toughest schedules we have had in recent years," coach Gerald "Dutch" Gossett said. "And since this is our first season in two years it makes it even harder for us to be respectable against strong Division I schools."

Eastern was pummeled last weekend by Indiana State, Bowling Green and Northern Illinois 9-0, 9-0, and 8-1, respectively. Both NIU and ISU are ranked in the top 20 in the Midwest.

Gossett has still found a couple of good omens out of the rubble of defeat.

"Since we are a very young team this is really going to help us in the future," Gossett said. "Because of the top caliber of play we are facing, our young players are getting valuable experience that will benefit them quite a bit next year."

Eastern will be without the services of Ron Easter, who is student teaching, this weekend. Mick Spencer will take over his spot on the team.

Mike Larson (in front) and John McInerney will form half of the Panther four-mile relay team in the Eastern Relays Saturday at O'Brien Field. John Christy and Casey Reinking will be the other runners. (News photo by Richard Foertsch).

More road dates scheduled for 'off and on' baseballers

by R.B. Fallstrom

The pitching was on and the hitting off in Wednesday's baseball doubleheader at Illinois State, but coach J.W. Sanders' crew will try to put everything together this weekend in two road doubleheaders.

The Panthers will travel to University of Illinois-Chicago Circle Saturday and St. Joseph's College in Rensselaer, Ind., Sunday.

Eastern stayed five games below the 500 mark at 12-17 Wednesday, splitting 2-1 decisions with ISU. Tom Doyle hurled a one-hitter for his fourth victory, and Rick Furmanski also allowed only one hit in over five innings in the loss.

Furmanski (2-0) has lowered his earned run average to a stingy 2.14, while Doyle (4-1) is right behind with a 2.16 ERA.

On the other hand, Eastern's offense produced 15 hits in the twin-bill, but only three runs.

"We didn't get any base hits with runners in scoring position (Wednesday). We can't seem to get them both together," Sanders commented.

"But we're getting better and better. I'm just nitpicking."

Tom Ozga and Larry Olsen will pitch against Chicago Circle, while the mound duo Sunday will be Rick Dobrovich and Terry Etnier.

The starting positions are filled, with the exception of designated hitter. Rick Phillippi and Jim Lyons, who were bumped from starting roles at catcher and left field, respectively, have not produced up to expectations.

Phillippi is hitting .298, but his bat has been silent as of late. Lyons is hitting .225.

Sanders will experiment with Craig Oats (.136) and John Theriault (.136) this weekend at the DH slot.

Shortstop Jeff Gossett is still the top hitter on the team at .337. Paul Franson is the only other .300 hitter, checking in at .311. Franson has swiped 10 bases.

Golf team to compete at Bradley tourney

Eastern's golf team will participate in the Bradley invitational tournament Friday and Saturday in Peoria.

Last weekend the squad finished last in a field of 15 at the University of Illinois invitational.
